About The Topic

Dental Surgeon has broad responsibilities that are not restricted to their legal obligations but also include ethical obligations arising from their commitments to patients, to society and to professional ideals. Strong links exist between the responsibilities and the rights of dentists, including the right of professional autonomy, self-regulation and clinical freedom. These professional rights exist not only for the benefit of the dentists, but also enable them to provide quality and ethical oral health care for all members of the community, and to meet their professional responsibilities and commitments. When these professional rights are under threat, there may be a significant risk to the maintenance of professional standards.

Objectives of Event

The objectives of the seminar are as below

- Recognize and address role, duties and responsibilities of dental Surgeon towards community.
- Outlining the function of a code of conduct in a workplace that upholds ethical standards.
- Maintain efficient communication, showing empathy with inherited values during their training period while the patient is receiving treatment.
